Introduction

Over the last twenty years, businesses owned by Native women in the United States have grown almost twice as fast as women-owned businesses in general, at a rate of 201% compared to 114%, but slower than other minority groups.¹ To continue this growth trend and decrease the wealth gap that Native women experience compared to others, business supports that are designed with Native women in mind are needed. For the past five years, the Oklahoma Native Assets Coalition Inc. (ONAC), has participated as a member of the national Closing the Women's Wealth Gap (CWWG) Initiative. As part of this effort, ONAC conducted an online survey in July 2020, to collect information about realities faced by Native women entrepreneurs as they work to support their families and tribal communities. Based on the summary results, in November 2020, ONAC published a summary data report entitled, "Native Women Business Owners: Building Assets, Strengthening their Communities, and Working to Close the Women's Wealth Gap."

Resources Needed

In their online ONAC survey responses, Native women entrepreneurs shared their challenges and desire for more resources in three key areas including: 1) Business Education 2) Financial Services and Products, and 3) Mentorship.

Business Education

Native businesswomen are interested in online and in-person training workshops, one-on-one entrepreneurship technical assistance, and entrepreneurship-related degree programs.

Financial Services and Products

Native businesswomen expressed a need for increased access to capital for small business start-up and expansion.

Mentorship

Business mentorship is one more request from Native businesswomen. Mentoring support could come from participation in Native chambers of commerce events, coalition conferences, and other Native-led mentoring networks.

Note About Possible Missing Resources

This document includes an initial compilation of resources that are available for Native women entrepreneurs across the country. These resource lists are not exhaustive. The descriptions of the resources are attributed to the entities providing information about their work. While ONAC staff tried to conduct a thorough search, given the number of federal and state recognized tribes, Native nonprofits, funding entities, associations, federal resources, etc., we may have inadvertently missed resources for this guide. To recommend additional resources, contact Christy Finsel, ONAC Executive Director, at cfinsel@oknativeassets.org.
